March 28, 2013

Dear Ms. Monisha Khadse,

I am glad to learn about the various activities that the "Vidyalaya" is engaged in educating kids in the language and culture of India and also that 300 students attend the "Vidyalaya" every Sunday during the school year.

I am also happy to know that to celebrate the rich and colourful culture from different states of India, "Vidyalaya" will be organizing 'Discover India Mela 2013' on May 19, 2013 which will be a fun fair of entertainment, food and games.

Much as I would have liked to attend, due to my prior commitments on that day, it would not be possible for me to attend the event. I send my best wishes to you and the organizers for the successful conduct of this event and look forward to your future events.

Yours sincerely,

(Dr. Devyani Khobragade)

Childhood in India in the 70's & 80's

- Though you may not publicly own to this, at the age of 5-8 years, you were very proud of your first “Bellbottom” or your first “Maxi”.
- Phantom & Mandrake were your only true heroes. You can also nod your heads to names like Chandamama, Champak, Lot-Pot, Nandan. The brainy ones read “Competition Success Review”.
- You took pride in turning to the back page of your latest Amar Chitra Katha and ticking off yet another title. How many ever you ticked, you still had many to go.
- Your “Camlin” geometry box & Flora pencil was your prized possession.
- The only “Holidays” you took were to go to your grandparents’ or your cousins’ houses.
- Ice cream meant only - either an orange stick, a vanilla softy in a cone or at most – a Choco Bar if you lived in a swanky town.
- Your first family car (and the only one) was a Fiat, or an Ambassador. This often had to be pushed by the entire family to get going.
- If you had a TV, it was normal to expect the neighborhood to gather around to watch the Chitrahaar or the Sunday movie. If you didn’t have a TV, you just went to a house that did. It mattered little if you knew the owners or not.
- Black & White TVs weren’t so bad after all because cricket was played in whites.
- The only “Gadgets” in the house were the TV, the Fridge and the Mixie.
- All the gadgets had to be duly covered with a crochet covers and sometimes even with ingenious, custom-fit plastic covers.
- Movies meant Amitabh Bachchan. Before the start of the movie you always had to watch the obligatory “newsreel”.
- You had a turntable “stereo” and a collection of LP Records. Your hormones went crazy when you bought “Disco Deewane” by Naziya Hassan & Zoheb Hassan.
- School Teachers, your parents and even your neighbors could whack you and it was all okay.
- When you really counted down days to "Diwali" every year.
